A significant body of research illuminates the ways in which kinship care benefits children and youth and increases positive child welfare outcomes. Building on that knowledge base, the term “Kin First” has been coined to identify policy and practice approaches that recognize the value of kinship relationships and prioritize kin as the preferred option if out-of-home placement is necessary. This session will highlight key research findings and review policy examples and practice strategies to prioritize kinship care and respond to the unique strengths and needs of kinship caregivers. Participants will leave with practical examples of tactics they can pursue in their own agencies and systems.

This intermediate-level course is appropriate for child welfare administrators, managers, supervisors, caseworkers, and others supporting youth in kinship care.

Participants will be able to:

- Describe at least 3 benefits to children of kinship care as compared to non-relative foster care.
- Describe at least 3 policy strategies to prioritize kinship care as the preferred option when children need out-of-home placement.
- Identify at least 3 examples of practices and supports to assist with the unique needs of kinship caregivers.

Continuing Education Credits

 The Institute for Human Services, #1802, is approved to offer social work continuing education by the Association of Social Work Boards (ASWB) Approved Continuing Education (ACE) program. Organizations, not individual courses, are approved as ACE providers. States and provincial regulatory boards have the final authority to determine whether an individual course may be accepted for continuing education credit. The Institute for Human Services maintains responsibility for this course.

This training is approved for 3 Social Work CE credits.

Note: This course is offered in Zoom. A few days prior to the session you will receive connectivity instructions via email. You must attend the whole session, remain on camera, complete an evaluation and pay the fee to receive CE credit for this course.
